The focus of continental philosophers of religion on the aporia may help resolve certain impasses, yet important questions remain: Do structural parallels between experiences of trauma and transcendence justify thinking trauma in terms of phenomenological event. How can one stop himself from responding to sins by pulling his eyes and cutting his hand. I love the creativity of the story. I call it a demonic divide. They don't even know, like, somebody's in there and stuff. Freelance author, Syafi'i.
